Summary
The Island of Ireland’s first-ever dedicated campaign, to raise greater public awareness and understanding of palliative care, took place from 6-11 October 2014.

It was developed by the All Ireland Institute of Hospice and Palliative Care (AIIHPC) and delivered in partnership with stakeholders across the sector in the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland.

Top line Outcomes

• An impact survey carried out directly after Palliative Care Week found that 42% of the population in the Republic of Ireland were aware of the awareness raising campaign and 26% in Northern Ireland (See Appendix A)
• Among those aware of the campaign, their understanding of palliative care was significantly higher (See Appendix A)
• Major endorsement of and engagement with the campaign was secured from across the palliative care sector
• 60 newspaper articles were published and 25 radio interviews broadcast (See Appendix B)

The campaign was delivered for a cost of €97,000 / £73,000 (inc. of VAT).

Next Steps
AIIHPC is delivering further palliative care awareness raising activities in Spring 2015.

Given the high level of impact, and sectoral support for the 2014 campaign, AIIHPC is keen to run a further Palliative Care Week in autumn 2015.

To run an autumn 2015 campaign AIIHPC is in the process of seeking statutory and / or third party sectoral support.
1. Introduction

All Ireland Institute of Hospice and Palliative Care

All Ireland Institute of Hospice and Palliative Care (AIIHPC) is an all island organisation comprised of a consortium of 17 partner organisations, including hospices, health care agencies and universities, all working to improve the experience of supportive and palliative care on the island of Ireland.

The Institute brings together three Work Package areas of Education, Research and Policy and Practice into a single entity, enabling the activities and outcomes of each to add value to the others.

All work programmes are interlinked and crosscut with the following four themes:

- Meaningful involvement of users, carers and communities in the development and delivery of palliative care education, research, policy and practice
- Development of a coherent and collaborative palliative care community
- Supporting the delivery of innovative, high quality palliative care education and research
- Translation of knowledge and learning for the development of palliative care policy and practice nationally and internationally.

AIIHPC’s Strategic Plan includes public engagement as one of its key work Activity areas; one of the target outcomes is to raise greater and improved public awareness of hospice and palliative care.

Public Awareness of Palliative Care

Research in Ireland has indicated that the public’s understanding of palliative care is varied and for many people palliative care remains synonymous with a narrow interpretation of death, dying or having a diagnosis of cancer. (McIlfatrick, et al., 2013)

However, the evidence shows that people whose loved ones have been in receipt of palliative and supportive care services are more likely to demonstrate a better understanding of palliative care. In order for the public to achieve greatest benefit from palliative care, it is necessary that they understand it and its benefits for supporting the quality of life of people with life limiting conditions.

2. Campaign Overview

In 2014 AllHPC set out to deliver major outputs on raising public awareness of palliative care by designing, developing, delivering and measuring a major public awareness campaign. After exploratory discussion, AllHPC planned to deliver a comprehensive Awareness Week in October 2014, to be called Palliative Care Week.

Objectives

The objectives for Palliative Care Week were to:

- Challenge the myths and limitations in public awareness and understanding of palliative care, and advance a new and broader public debate and understanding
- Use the activities as an opportunity to progress deeper relationships and joined up working across the sector
- Present evidence from AllHPC’s Let’s Talk About survey and Voices4Care initiatives to inform the campaign.

Audiences

- The primary audience was the general public and community in the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland.
- Secondary audiences included politicians, policy makers, health agencies, health professionals, service users and opinion leaders.

Reference Group

To develop and agree the Key Messages and Campaign Strategy AllHPC established a Reference Group which was representative of the sector North and South. The Terms of Reference for the Group were to advise on a campaign which:

- Is highly effective in terms of communications approach
- Identifies messages and content which are representative of thinking and issues across the sector
- Is reflective of patient perspectives
- Integrates harmoniously with messages and activities of other stakeholders across the sector.

Reference Group Members included:

- Dr. Mags Clifford, Irish Association of Palliative Care
- Sharon Foley: AllHPC Policy and Practice Steering Committee (Irish Hospice Foundation)
• Eithne Frost, AllHPC Management Committee (Voices4Care patient advocacy group member)
• Maeve Hully, CEO of the Northern Ireland Patient and Client Council
• Prof. George Kernohan, AllHPC Management Committee (University of Ulster)
• Dr Paul McIvor: AllHPC Policy and Practice Steering Committee (Medical Director Foyle Megan Perry: Communications Executive, Public Health Agency
• Dermot Ryan: Communications Manager Safefood
• Hospice)
• Dr. Karen Ryan, AllHPC Management Committee (Palliative Care Consultant St. Francis Hospice, Clinical Lead for Palliative Care in the HSE)

Engagement with the group included email circulars and phone conversations at critical points including:

• Outline of broad campaign strategy
• Soundboarding of Key Messages
• Feedback on first set of campaign materials design proofs.

Furthermore, AllHPC’s Policy and Practice Steering Committee were informed about the process and developments of the public awareness work and provided valuable feedback.

Key Messages

Following consultation with the Reference Group and Policy and Practice Steering Committee, the Key Messages agreed for the campaign were:

Palliative Care

• Aims to achieve the best possible quality of life for people with serious illness
• Cares for all aspects of the person - mind, body and spirit
• Is beneficial for everybody with a non-curable illness, regardless of age or condition
• Is supportive for family and friends both during an illness and afterwards
• The earlier it is delivered the better
• May be suitable for a number of years, not just end of life weeks and days.

Who is palliative care for?

• A baby born with serious difficulties that is unlikely to survive
• A child or young person with a condition that will shorten or severely limit their lives
• An adult coping with a diagnosis such as motor neuron disease, cancer or a chronic respiratory disorder
• An older person facing a progressive condition such as dementia or other conditions that could significantly affect their quality of life.
3. Campaign Development

Resourcing

Communications Consultant

AIIHPC recruited Communications Consultant Ronan Cavanagh of Cavanagh Communications to lead on Palliative Care Week working closely with AIIHPC Director Paddie Blaney. Ronan was already in situ as part-time Communications Consultant for AIIHPC and a time allocation and budget was agreed for him to provide the resource required to deliver the campaign.

Design and Advertising

Following a competitive Tender process, a Dublin based agency Publicis Engage, was recruited to deliver the campaign design and advertising elements including branding, information materials, the advertising materials and media buying.

The information materials were to include the development of a Document Folder, Information Leaflet, Poster and Bookmark.

A budget of €60,000 was available to buy media advertising in both jurisdictions.

Stakeholders

To build stakeholder engagement AIIHPC held a number of key meetings in the run up to the campaign.

Republic of Ireland

In the Republic of Ireland (RoI) meetings were held with the Minister with responsibility for Palliative Care, Kathleen Lynch and the HSE Lead on Palliative Care, Ian Carter.

Furthermore, detailed phone conversations were held with Palliative Care leads in the Department of Health (RoI) and the HSE Communications Office.

The HSE Communications Office circulated the campaign briefing on internal memo to 60,000 HSE staff. It also displayed the campaign hyperlink on the Homepage of its website at www.hse.ie for the week.

Northern Ireland

In Northern Ireland (NI), key members of the Public Health Agency were met along with key representatives from the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety. Also in the NI Health and Social Care Trusts Communications Leads and Palliative Care leads were met with.

Communications Leads in each Northern Irish Health and Social Care Trusts issued a briefing to staff and the PHA placed the campaign hyperlink on their website Home at www.publichealth.hscni.net.

Database

To support the campaign a very comprehensive email and postal database of all palliative care stakeholders across the island was developed – and this was continuously added to and updated during the campaign.
4. Campaign Delivery

Information Materials

Approximately 2,200 campaign Information Packs were distributed. The Packs included:

1. A Document Folder
2. An Information Leaflet
3. Posters
4. Bookmarks
5. A Communications Toolkit including Key Messages, sample Tweets developed by Cavanagh Communications.

Four ‘Campaign Update’ emails were issued to a comprehensive database of key palliative care professionals and patient advocates across the Island.

See Appendix C for samples of the campaign information materials, or they can be viewed at www.palliativecareweek.com.

Advertising

€64,000 / £49,000 was spent on radio, newspaper and online advertising North and South and an estimated €150,000 / £114,000 of media advertising value delivered against the spend. This reached an estimated 1.2m people (900,000 RoI and 300,000 NI).

The advertising included:

Newspapers

- 7 ads in Irish Independent (one free of charge)
- 1 ad in Sunday Independent
- 7 ads in Belfast Telegraph
- 1 ad in Irish News (at knockdown rate)
- 1 ad in Newsletter (full page at knockdown rate)

Radio

- 26 radio ads on Newstalk Radio in RoI
- 12 radio ads between RTE Radio One & Lyric FM
- 18 ads on Regional Stations in RoI
- 26 radio ads on U105 in NI
- 24 radio ads on Downtown / Cool FM in NI
- 120 radio ads across Q Radio Network in NI
Online

- A week of online advertising on independent.ie (Irish Independent)
- A week of online advertising on Belfast Telegraph.co.uk

See Appendix C for samples of the campaign adverts.

Media

Three news releases were issued to all relevant media - print, radio, TV and online. Each release was ‘localised’ into RoI and NI versions. Major local media coverage was secured which greatly helped the campaign, particularly local radio. This comprised of:

- 60 newspaper articles (both national and local)
- 25 radio interviews (both national and local)
- TV coverage on RTE and TV3

See Appendix B for a listing of articles and interviews (Full Media report available upon request.)

Website

A dedicated Palliative Care Week website at www.palliativecareweek.com was developed and included general information, definitions, go to points for information and services, links, campaign materials for download, videos and media information.

The site recorded the following usage:

Activity

- 11,081 webpages viewed
- 5,618 visits
- 4,864 unique visits

Country

- 2,604 (46%) RoI
- 1,775 (31%) NI & Britain
- 931 (16.5%) USA.

Format

- 64% accessed via a computer
- 21% accessed via a tablet
- 15% accessed via a mobile phone
Access Routes

- 56% (3,154) were direct visitors (meaning they typed the URL directly into the browser or clicked a link in an email/pdf)
- 31% (1,778) of visitors were referred to the website (this means they clicked a link from another webpage)
- 15% of referrals came from the Irish Independent website, 14% from the Belfast Telegraph website and 15% from the AIIHPC website
- The biggest referring website was Western Health and Social Care Trust in Northern Ireland (27% of referrals)
- 10% (601) clicked a social media link such as Twitter
- 1.5% of traffic came from a Google search.

Social Media

There were 224 tweets which included the campaign hashtag #pallcareweek and 36 of these were issued by AIIHPC.

Events

Dozens of information and patient focused events were held across the island.

Major highlights were a week of events in Derry / Londonderry, including at Magee University and at the Guildhall organised by Foyle Hospice. A two day information stand took place at the Milk Market in Limerick City organised through Milford Care Centre and a week of information events took place in the North West, organised by the North West Hospice.

Information circulars to staff and on site patient information events were organised by the Health and Social Care Trusts across Northern Ireland. Furthermore, information stands were placed at many major hospitals across the island, organised by Palliative Care staff members.

Costs

The total campaign cost was €97,000 / £73,000 (inclusive of VAT) broken down into:

- Advertising spend = €64,000 / £49,000
- Creative Concepts, Design, Production and Print = €16,000 / £12,000
- Communications Consultant = €12,000 / £9,000

Feedback from a Nurse

“As a long term Palliative Care Nurse I think this is an excellent and much needed initiative to raise public awareness of the concept and philosophy of palliative care and to highlight the benefits of engaging with conversations around death and dying. It also promotes death as the natural process which we have sought to do in palliative care since its inception and which we need to hold on to. Looking at the website I have been reminded of focus groups which I did a short time ago with people with learning disabilities who taught me that this group of people are capable of taking part in conversations about a taboo subject such as death and can do so in a natural manner.”
• Millward Brown impact research = €5,000 / £3,000.

Significant additional time and support was provided by AIHPC staff and this was absorbed within their ongoing running costs.

5. Campaign Impact

In the immediate period after Palliative Care Week, research company Millward Brown carried out representative surveys of 1,000 people in both the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland.

The key finding of the survey was that awareness of Palliative Care / Palliative Care Week was strong in both the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland, especially in the Republic, where 42% said they were aware of the awareness raising. Recognition was also high in the North at 26%.

Radio attracted by far the most reach in the Republic – one in four heard of the campaign via this medium. The effect of local radio was striking – 14% of the population cited this as a source. TV was also prominent, as 8% of people in the RoI said they heard it discussed on TV. The information sources in Northern Ireland were more balanced – NI respondents did not nominate any particular medium as being significantly ahead of others.

Among those who were aware of Palliative Care Week, the outcome was positive – 79% in the Republic of Ireland felt they were more informed as a result of the campaign, with 63% in Northern Ireland feeling similarly.

The overriding consensus in both jurisdictions was that palliative care is both beneficial for anyone with a non-curable disease and that it supports family, friends and carers both during and after an illness. Among those aware of the campaign, their understanding of palliative care was significantly higher in nearly all instances, in both jurisdictions.

The survey concluded that the awareness week was significantly successful in better educating the public on the function and purpose of palliative care.

“I have just seen some of the materials of the palliative care approach campaign in October presented at the Living Matters Dying Matters meeting. The tone, content and approach feel so right. Thank you to the Institute for making this investment that will cover the Island, and give us all an opportunity to reach out to the public who ultimately will drive the agenda. I particularly liked the fact that death and dying were not mentioned in the materials, as we have to start first with all the positive messages surrounding Palliative Care. THANK YOU.” Feedback from a Hospital Medical Director

The campaign used a series five rotating ads which told five different vignette stories about how Palliative Care can improve quality of life for people of different ages, with different conditions and different prognoses.

The five stories can be viewed and read in the pages to follow.
Jack, age 11 years
Living with Muscular Dystrophy

When he was younger Jack and his parents were told that his condition could not be cured. To ensure that Jack enjoys the best quality of life possible, his medical team made sure that his care plan includes a palliative care approach. Since then Jack’s care helps meet his body, mind and spiritual needs so that he can live as normally as possible. His parents, brother and sisters are also given support.
